U.S. Nurse Freed

(Reuter) An American nurse kidnapped at gunpoint by the Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF) almost one month ago was set free today,

They said Deborah Dortzbach, 24, of Freehold, who is five months pregnant, was released in the Eritrean port of Massawa. Mrs. Dortzbach was kidnapped by the guerrilla organization from an American missionary hospital in Ghinda near here May 27. Another nurse, Anna Stickwerda, 55, from the Nether lands, was kidnapped along with Mrs. Dortzbach but was later shot dead by the ELF.

The sources said Mrs. Dortzbach was joined by her husband, Karl, and was undergoing a medical check-up in Massawa.

Two Canadians and three Americans still are being held by the ELF. They are Don Wederfort, 27, or Calgary; Cliff James, 27, Walkerton, Ont.; Powers Cayce, 36, Plainview, Tex.; Matte Tave-la, 52, an American with land-

All altrical birds, those that spend several days in the nest, and several more soon after they leave the nest, under the solicitous care of their parents, resort to the squeaking wheel routine sooner or later

At first, while the nest is the focus of their respective worlds, both the young birds and their parents react more to visual stimuli than to auditory stimuli in communicating their needs.

At this stage, any movement at the edge of the nest, or at the entrance hole of a or at the entrance hole of a cavity nest, provokes a vigorous response from the young birds. They instinctively stretch their necks, wave their heads and open their beaks revealing the colorful interiors of their mouths.

This performance means "feed me" to the adult bird and she, or he, immediately unloads a beakful of food into

Mechanical Choice

The choice of which mouth is purely mechanical. If the gaping maw chosen swallows the food immediately, so far so good, if not, the food is quickly retrieved and offered to another gaping throat, and another, until swallowed.

As the young birds grow, this purely mechanical visual communication is augmented with auditory messages, weak cries and twitters, which help the parents make the impordecision of who to feed and when.

Soon the noise begins to take over as a means of com-munication so much so that the nest of several species — woodpeckers and starlings for example — can easily be found by simply tracking down the rousing rumpus emanating from its interior.

But the great day is at hand; the young are leaving the nest and scattering into the cover of the world around them, now that auditory com-munication developed in the nest begins to take over.

Where formerly a parent bird had only to recall the location of its nest to know where its young were, contact must now be maintained with several highly mobile targets scattered discreetly in an ever-expanding world. Only a system of auditory signals will solve this problem and the birds have one ready for action, one perfected before leaving the next.

From this, what might be called search-and-subdue stage, it is only a step to where the young begin to forage for themselves. But the and they still keep a close watch on their parents, crying stridently for every choice morsel turned up.

The parents, now pressed on all sides by overgrown bullies they once recognized as their young, react—almost in self-defence—to the one that hollers loudest, and the squeaking wheel has won

Snuffing Out Debate NDP Style

Rather than vote on a motion to establish time limits on house debates at future sessions the Social Credit caucus walked out in a huff last Thursday. A futile gesture in itself, the move emphasized the opposition's disgust with one contentious section which the NDP refused to amend.

The section in question would restrict debate of departmental estimates to 135 hours or 45 sittings. Each MLA would be given only seven minutes to debate one portfolio's estimates. In other words, the Conservative party, which represented 136,513 votes in the 1972 election would have only 14 minutes to debate each cabinet minister's estimates because the party has only two sitting members.

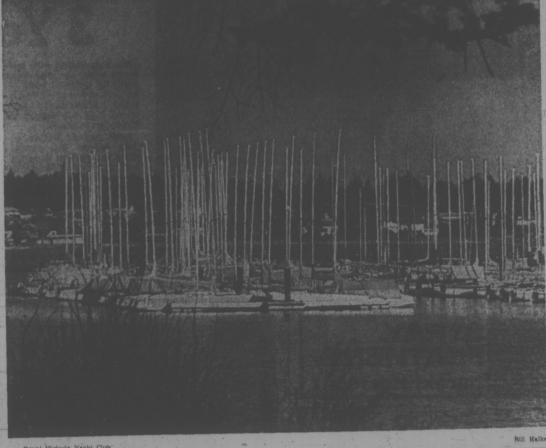

No matter how the section is worded, its essence means closure, a snuffing out of debate which can only hurt the parliamentary process and work to the advantage of a government in power that has something to hide.

Consideration of departmental estimates is one of the most important functions of a democratic legislature. Each minister of the crown must present a detailed estimate of his department's proposed spending for the next year. And it is through a minute examination of the estimates that the opposition makes the government responsible in the fiscal sense. With only seven minutes allotted to each member the process becomes a

When the NDP was in opposition, Mr. Robert Williams, who now occupies the Resource portfolio in the NDP cabinet, used to drub Social Credit cabinet ministers hour after hour when they presented their estimates. Mr. Williams and his colleagues on the other side of the House scored telling points and often embarrassed the government. Now that the NDP sits on the governing side of the House it has decreed that the opposition can enjoy only part of the freedom which Premier Barrett and his colleagues used with such telling effect.

If the government does not amend the section at the fall session, it will demonstrate arrogance not only towards the opposition. but to the parliamentary system it-

Mr. Bennett Remains Aloof

Dr. Scott Wallace is already blaming provincial Social Credit Leader. Bill Bennett for the future re-election of the NDP government - an event that is anything but certain. Dr. Wallace continues to hammer for a united opposition to defeat the NDP in the next election while Mr. Bennett calmly issues invitations to Liberals and Conservatives to join Social Credit.

It is impossible to speculate on which party or parties will eventually defeat the NDP - apart from Oak Bay Conservative MLA the NDP itself. The shadowy socalled majority movement appears to be going nowhere, particularly in assisting lost causes such as the protest against the Mineral Royalties Act. And among all the opposition parties Social Credit, with 10 MLAs compared to five Liberals and two Conservatives, sees itself as the natural base around which any unified opposition will coalesce. In other words, Mr. Bennett probably feels he can afford to wait rather than submerge his party in a free enterprise coalition which, historically speaking.

proved a disaster for old-line B.C. political parties in 1951.

Provincial Liberal Leader David Anderson has also disavowed any interest in joining with other political parties. That leaves Dr. Wallace and an undisclosed number of free enterprise MLAs wandering in a political vacuum. Things may change before the next provincial election but in the meantime the Conservative leader could spend more time on his own party rather than stumbling in noman's-land and haranguing the boys back in the trenches.

Brinkmanship on the Seine

While so much remains to be improved in Canada it may be unfair to look abroad for examples of poor urban planning. But certainly it should be in order to applaud the move of France's new President d'Estaing to rescue Notre Dame Cathedral from the threat of having a superhighway thrust through its neighborhood.

It seems that the late President Pompidou had planned to run an expressway through the ancient tree-lined quays by the cathedral, desecrating history as well as the environment. Under the urging of many French citizens, President d'Estaing has announced that he will "re-examine" the project which is taken to mean that the unfortunate proposal is now dead.

Also dead, many Parisians hope, are Mr. Pompidou's plans for a superhighway to ring the capital, and a number of new skyscrapers to intrude further on the famous skyline of the city.

Paris is more than a city for Parisians, or even for Frenchmen. It is a focus of admiration and affection for people all over the world, and its physical protection against the encroachments of the automobile and other twentiethcentury developments is a matter? of concern to a global public.

Against Mr. Pompidou's declaration of 1971 that "we must adapt Paris to the automobile," is Mr. d'Estaing's current plan to "adapt the automobile to Paris." That is a concept which people in all countries might well adoptparticularly we in Canada, we in British Columbia, we in Victoria.

The Necessary Tidying Up

OTTAWA - The statement of principles agreed to here by the NATO foreign ministers, which may come to be known as the Ottawa Declaration, is a moderately important piece of tidying up, of getting the house in order, by a group of countries which recognize that their futures are largely tied together.

On the face of it, the declaration is an up-to-date re-statement of principles which the alliance has accepted from the beginning. Even if that were all, it would be no bad thing.

There is merit, as Dr. Kissinger suggested at the end, in reminding the countries of the alliance of the realities they live with, which are not the same as those of the days 25 years ago when the alliance was put together.

That is not, however, quite all of it. The ups and downs of the project since Kissinger first put it forward in a New York speech on April 23, 1973, are significant too. It is really by putting the meeting here beside those ups and downs that we can judge the present state of things. The declaration is the product of a testing time in relationships within the alliance and of the relations of its members with countries outside the

Coolly Received

The Kissinger idea was coolly received at first. Even American newspapers largely ignored it, in the midst of the Watergate revelations which were opening up with a vengeance at that point. There had been predictions before Kissinger's speech, and a visit to Moscow that followed immediately afterwards, that President Nixon would seek to use foreign affairs as a way to divert attention away from the scandal that was enveloping his administration. The dinginess of Watergate was already clouding the "year of Europe" which Nixon had proclaimed a few months earlier and the secretary's proposal seemed to become submerged in the general

The major events which have taken place in the intervening months, however, have been of great magnitude: the Middle East war last October, the drastic re-pricing of crude oil by the producing states with all of the ramifications of that action in a world where a Kissinger's exceptionally successful diplomacy in the Middle East, even its first steps, are in fact improvements that would have seemed beyond hope not many months earlier.

When American forces were placed on a world-wide alert during the October war without any consultation between the United States and its allies, shocker shudder went through the alliance and through this capital as much as the others. The justification for the American action was openly questioned. The action itself was widely regarded as an unsound response to whatever the Soviet Union had been preparing to do.

On his side, Kissinger was openly furious with his country's allies and he let his intolerance of them be widely advertised.

When the shock died down on one side and the anger on the other, there followed some appreciation that these were reactions that the members of the alliance could not very well afford. It was largely because of this that this week's restatement of principles could be successfully worked out.

The difficulties that flowed from October were not the only ones, though. Relations between most of the same countries, although outside the precise NATO context, were about as badly strained over the oil issue.

When Nixon organized the Washington conference at the beginning of the year to consider the oil situation, the European nations were suspicious. tended to regard it as, at best, an attempt to divert attention away from his Watergate problems and, at worst, a dangerous effort to gang-up on the oil producers, who had it in their power to retaliate against any course that looked like a Western effort to bully them out of their new price structures. Strain grew again when Kissinger reacted badly to the decision of the European Community members to talk directly to the Arab states about oil. The

he has genuine accomplishments to his credit, and he also possesses some of the characteristics of a prima donna.

The snappish reactions that were developing between the United States and its allies last winter were again getting, into the category of dangerous luxuries. The background was full of factors that ranged from discouraging to alarming.

At one level, the various sets of talks with the Soviet Union were moving very unevenly, where they were moving at all. The process of what Kissinger has called "constant negotiation" endured but little was emerging from the spout. The bilateral American talks with Moscow, SALT II, were bogged on the difficult problem of multiple re-entry nuclear missiles, as they still are.

At the big European security conference which had moved to Geneva after a fairly promising start in Helsinki, little progress was being achieved on the difficult question of freer movement of ideas and people. To the Western countries, progress on that issue is a critical bench-mark by which to judge relations with the Soviet Union.

Parallel Conference

The parallel conference on force reduction was in the same doldrums as the others. It looked very much as though the Russian leadership was placing detente on ice while it estimated the political vitality of Nixon after Watergate. It was a reminder, if nothing else; that detente with the Soviet Union is still a Much greater doubts, however, were arising on the economic side. Attention tends to be centred on the problem of the inflation which torments this and every that are not so far advanced.

A more critical problem than the painful level of prices, although related to it, is the strain that is being imposed on the international monetary structure This is coming from the great balance of payments problems that are now starting to develop fully from the new level of oil prices. They carry with them grave threats to trading patterns.

It is likely that every foreign minister here this week would have conceded privately that he is far more worried by the danger of Italian economic collapse and all that might follow than by anything the Soviet Union is currently doing. This all mounts to a picture of a world in which countries cannot afford to have their relationships troubled and untidy. No one expects a brave new world from the Ottawa Declaration but no one should scoff at any tidying up govern-to blame but itself for this state of affairs. The wheel has come full circle from the kind of American thinking that, in the 1950's and 1960's, suspected a Communist plot behind every political development in the world. From the Iran of Mossadegh 20 years ago to the Chile of Allende in 1973, there have been ample facts and plausible reports of C.I.A. involvement in the overthrow of governments and the propping up of dictators - all augmented by the implacable set of American policy in Southeast Asia for the last 15 years - to account for the world's paranoïa.

So when Soares became Foreign Minister a few weeks ago, he did not even try to approach the State Department directly; he asked his friends, Harold Wilson of Britain and Willy Brandt of West Germany, to put him in touch. They did, and no doubt Source will soon be getting red-carpet treatment in Washington; but he has not forgotten — and probably won't — the years when no one but third secretaries paid attention to him.

An Opposition Jockeying for Lead

During the last angry min-utes of debate in the legisla-ture Thursday, an opposition member said the session would not be remembered as the longest but as the worst in B.C. history.

After 20 frustrating weeks of bitter debate and endless political jostling among oppo-sition members, the simple remark seemed appropriate.

The MLA was angry at the government's insistence on limiting the length of all future debate in the house and depressed by the knowledge the limitations were the inevi-table outcome of the longest legislative session ever corded in B.C.

Early in the session it became clear the whip system had broken down and the gov ernment had lost control in the house, leaving debate to drag on endlessly.

before the voting starts, to prevent measures being passed which the most power-

/Looked at in this light, any progress at all at Caracas will be a remarkable acheive deal for itself.

But the press is trapped. It has a vested interest in elections. The press devotes in-credible resources to each campaign: almost hundred reporters travel with the leaders. So the press hypes up elections to make them appear more important and interesting than they are.

The second failure is more subtle. Academic critics worry about the power of the press. The real problem is the exact opposite — that the press is powerless, powerless that is to prevent itself from being used.

Provide the press with color and you'll get publicity. That formula has never failed.

Most newspapers favor the Conservatives. Most reporters like Robert Stanfield, person, best among the leaders. Yet Trudeau so far has won the media campaign. He has a true politician's flair for self-dramatization. His train ride, the appearance of Mar-garet and Sacha, his rescue of all are "pseudo events," to use Daniel Boorstein's phrase, toon-it-must-be-Tuesday quality. The press can handle conmatic. The debate, for examole, over Stanfield's price and ncome controls. But only a would know that the most inthe election is the New Democrat policy of a two-price system, with the prices, in Canada, of Canadian-made goods held down while our exports are sold at world prices. The problem is that no one has attacked that policy. It has no dramatic edge to it. So it is dull. So it isn't newsworthy.

The Boys on the Bus described the artificial life of reporters as they bounce along behind the candidates, "like a pack of hounds sicked on a ence opened in Caracas, Venezuela, this week. With close to 150 countries and 5,000 delegates attending, it will be one of the largest interna-tional meetings ever held. Deciding how 70 per cent of the earth's surface is to be ruled, and its resources divided, is no small task, and it seems likely this 10-week session will be followed by another in Vienna in 1975.

Even this conference is not the "first" law of the sea meeting. The first, held 16 years ago, put down in writ-ing the rules of the sea as they had emerged in the three centuries that the navies, merchant ships and fishing fleets of Europe had roamed the oceans of the world.

The laws that the 1958 conference put down reflected the future. Because of this, they soon seemed obsolescent.

Besides this, the laws were inconclusive on two key points. One was how wide the territorial sea could be. The other was the proper boundary of the continental shelf.

The question of the width of the territorial sea caused problems for while most states at that time claimed a three-mile sea, some claimed

Who Says Crime Doesn't Pay?

One of the last great bargains in this age of 35-cent candy bars and 65-cent gasoline is crime.

The bargain-conscious gentleman tive in a large corporation, a man professionally quick at the science of holding down budgets while increasing profit. In today's market, he believes crime is such a bargain that big companies ought to be setting up legitimate crime divisions to fulfill their obligation to stockholders to maximize profits.

His point is that while the cost of socks has been rising like corn in Iowa the cost of committing the most profit able crimes has not gone up in 20, 30, in some cases 40 years

Recently, for example, several big ompanies and their executives were caught in the highly profitable business of making illegal campaign contribu-tions, and were convicted. Although the contributions ranged from $25,000 to $100,000, the maximum fine for each guilty firm was only $5,000; for each executive, only $1,000.

At these prices the companies and their bosses would have been failing their stockholders if they had not cho-sen crime over law and order. Crime was a great buy and the capital risks

For a criminal $100,000 given to a presidential candidate, as all these gifts were, donors were buying the future good opinion of big men in government, men who, because of the interlocking relationship of business and government these days, were in position to return the campaign favor in ways highly profitable to the donor.

Such relationships (see the case of the milk producers' campaign contribu-tion to President Nixon) may pay off in millions for the donor. And what does it cost if he's caught? Peanuts: $5,000 for a corporation, $1,000 for an executive.

Even this trifle is easily recouped. The executive finds an extra thousand added to his annual bonus, and the company may get the full $6,000 back out of its customers with a slight price in-crease. "Rising costs" is the going jus-tification, and the public pays the fine. The costs of breaking the antitrust laws can be higher, but they rarely are.

More often, when you are caught raking in the boodle from an antitrust caper, the government is content to tell you to cease, desist and divest.

In view of the immense profit to be made from crime, my bargain-conscious executive argues, good management policy would justify many corporations in establishing crime divisions, on an equal footing with sales, promotion, distribution, engineering and so forth.

The corporate vice president in charge of crime would be a raffish per-

Under most corporate organizations at present, the dirty work has to be done by a college-educated man with strong drives to look respect able in his upper middle-class suburb able in his upper middle-class suburb. The threat of showing up in court leaves him terrified, and his reluctance to do the job with gusto makes for greater inefficiency.

Greater efficiency all around would also be achieved with a properly organized crime division capable of tight scheduling and planned programming.

Under present helter-skelter practices, companies must go through the elaborate and costly minute to trying to American justice.

Once it is agreed openly that crime is good business, most of this fol-de-rol can be eliminated. Ample notice can be given the police that the illegal gift, say, will be made at a specified time and place. The donor, upon handing over, say, $100,000 could be arrested immediately. mediately.

The court, having received ample advance notice from the company, sits immediately. The donor pleads guilty, pays the $5,000 penalty and telephones the company a pre-arranged signal to raise prices immediately to recoup the OTTAWA - Some time after the last general election the Parliamentary Press Gallery had occasion to create a rather humorous ditty called The West, a Test for Trudeau, which was sung to the tune of The West, a Nest and You.

The west is still very much a test for Prime Minister Trudeau and the handful of Liberal members who are fighting frantically for their political lives.

fight. There is no doubt in anyone's mind that the Con-servatives will again sweep the province, returning 19 members to Parliament. Not only will there be a sweep, but the extent of it will be awesome.

It is a safe bet that 16 of the 19 Liberal candidates, and possibly 17 of them, will lose their deposits by failing to poll half as many votes as the

the only reason the Liberal will save his deposit is because the Conservative member in the last Parlia-ment lost his bid for renomination as the official Tory candidate and is running as an Independent Conservavative vote.

The only Alberta riding where the Liberals claim any hope at all is Medicine Hat where former agriculture minister Bud Olson is challenging Bert Hargraves.

In British Columbia the situation is even worse for the Liberals in the sense that there they have seats to lose.

B.C. feturned four Liberals, eight Conservatives and 11 NDP members in the 1972 general election. Political pundits are already convinced the Liberals will lose three of their four seats and may be wiped out completely.

Only Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford is given much chance of retaining his seat. Fisheries Minister Jack Davis is regarded as beaten, as are the Liberal candidates in the two interior ridings they held the last election.

Here, Liberal prospects are 100 per cent better than in BC. It appears that they won't lose more than half of their seats—and have a good chance of holding them both.

It is generally expected the Conservatives will win Selkirk riding from the DNP. Doug Rowland held it by 20 votes in 1972.

In short, it appears to western eyes that Trudeau and his Liberal government are mighty high on principle when it is western wealth being spread around — but there is great hesitancy to give western producers equal access to Quebec's egg market.

Quebec's egg market.

A more important factor in pinpointing western dislike of the Liberals, is the royalty taxation issue that arose in the May 6 budget. In short, the budget provided that royalty payments to provincial governments would no longer be "deductible" in calculating federal taxes. The provision means hundreds of millions of dollars in additional taxes for petroleum and mining companies.

The effect was overwhelming. While everyone likes to use big resources industry companies as whipping boys, the fact is they don't like los-ing propositions.

The federal action, sprung on the provinces and the in-dustry in the budget, meant that some companies would face taxes of more than 100

It all adds up to a scale of political ad-hocery that would establish precedents whereby the central government can pick and choose its targets.

Naturally, based on long ex-perience, the western prov-inces know what the prime target will be. That's why the Liberals are dead in the west. The colonies are being plun-dered again — both the rich Alberta and the poor Saskat-

Both Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield and NDP Leader David Lewis recognize, with Trudeau, that exceptional resource wealth in any province should go to the benefit of all Canadians.

But Stanfield abhors the way the Trudeau government has suddenly superimposed itself on the resource revenue field.

He has a deep conviction

He has a deep conviction that an agreement with the provinces could be feathed, as was done when the federal government moved into the income tax field.

The Tory leader believes that in agreeing to the $6.50 price on oil Premiers Lougheed and Blackeney indicated their willingness to share their bounty and that all pre-miers would be willing to work out a fair federal-provincial sharing arrangement on tax revenues. Naturally, Stanfield isn't giving Blakeney too much public credit — but his feelings are obvious.

In any event, Stanfield insists there is a better way to deal with the provinces than the confrontation route taken by Trudeau.

His message isn't exactly what the Albertans and British Columbians want to hear, but it's a much more reason-able tune than they are hear. ing from the Liberals.

Resource Tax

VANCOUVER (CP) - Finance Minister John Turner has warned the four western vinces to get ready for a fight over resource revenues.

Speaking at a public meeting here Thursday in support of Vancouver-Quadra Liberal candidate Frank Low-Beer, Turner said new mineral roy-alty legislation in British Co-lumbia and Manitoba and revised oil taxes in Alberta and Saskatchewan have shaken the federal revenue structure.

"Suppose Ontario decided to move into transportation or manufacturing. The tax base would become so fractured we'd end up with 10 little fiefdoms," he said.

"The people of Canada can't'be crippled by unilateral

Turner said the federal gov-ernment had been reduced to a five per cent share on oil and gasoline revenues while Alberta and Saskatchewan collect 45 per cent; and Ottawa gets 12 per cent on miner-al products revenues com-pared with 30 per cent collect-ed by B.C. and Manitoba.

"There must be an incentive for mining and oil compa-nies to reinvest and explore,"

"They've got to do better than survive — they have to be able to compete on world markets."

Turner, who was interrupt-ed frequently by hecklers, de-voted most of his 50-minute speech to a defence of his $450 million-deficit budget which led to the defeat of the minority Liberal government in May and to repeated attacks on Conservative fiscal policy.

The finance minister said even Conservative candidates don't understand Opposition leader Robert Stanfield's price and wage control pro-gram. "Stanfield can't ex-plain it and nobody, no union, no farmer, no independent no farmer, no independent businessman, is going to buy

Audience Needs Strong Stomach

The surrealistic novel was first published in 1959, and established the St. Louis-born Burroughs as a hero and spokesman of the underground "beat generation" of that decade.

Not many, if any, ever dreamed the book, whose main theme is the horror of drug addiction, would ever be brought to the boards.

But the Chicago Project-New York has done it, and done it well — for an audience with a strong stomach.

The dramatization, in one short act and two long ones, is replete with the seamiest scenes of an addict's degradation, language that will curdle the minds of the prim and proper, explicit although si-mulated scenes of sex min-gled with death, and so on.

Well into the play, the character playing Burroughs (who was an addict himself for 15 years) takes the stage in monologue. The play, he says, is moral in purpose. Moose Calf Regains Its Sight

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A two-week-old moose calfhere has regained its sight after a week of care from Nancy, Murray, a research biologist with the B.C. Fish and Wildlife Branch.

The female calf was found last week near here, apparently abandoned by its mother.

Ulcers had blinded the calf and antibiotics and bandages were applied.

Miss Murray said the bandages have been removed and the ulcers have gone. She said the animal has gained nine pounds and now weighs 31 pounds.

"We'll keep it for another 10 days then take it back to the vet for a checkup," said Miss Murray. "Then it will probably go to the Okanagan Game Farm."

Wilderness Survival Faces Young Probationers

'It'll Probably Scare the Hell Out of Them'

There Are Things in Life They Must Face'

A no-nonsense, rough, tough program is being set up for young offenders placed on probation by the courts

Due to start next month, the program, specializing in mountain rescue and wilder-ness survival, will be conducted out of the B.C. Correctional property in Metchosin at a site five miles south of the federal penal institute at William Head

Called the Metchosin Camp weekend program it will take young probationers, age 17 to 22, and, in a minimum 12-week course, teach them to nificance. It is the key philos-ophy behind the Outward

Bound movement. Corrections authorities have now unabash-edly borrowed it for their own. Senior instructor Bill Pogson calls the program a new experiment. He says it is a spin-off the wilderness survival course offered at the Boulder Bay camp on Alouette Lake. Tht big difference is the Metchosin program will be held on weekends only, from Friday afternoon to Sunday

It is designed, he says, to take probationers and throw them into a wilderness setting with the intention of teachi them there are things in life they can't run away from.

"We have two goals. We want to keep the young offenders off the streets on weekends. And we want to give these kids, who are lacking in almost all social thing for someone else."

An employee of the correct

tions service for seven years, Pogson, 29, says most offenders have a failure syndrome.

"This program will show them what they can do ... quite frankly it will probably shock the hell out of them.'

The program, which will take a class of 12 probationers at a time - and a new class is designed for surprise.

"We may go up to a group who was just about to sit down to lunch and haul them off to the far side of a wilderness lake and say to them 'Okay it is dark in five hours you've got that much time to get back to camp'.

"These kids, who have been able to run away from any-thing they didn't like before, suddenly realize they've got to solve this problem . . . and they will have to work together to do so using whatever skills they have.

"It teaches them to accept people for what they are.

That's one basic lesson. Another is doing something for someone else.

"We will emphasize projects which would be of benefit to others, such as building cabins for hikers or making

Battle Brewing On New Marina

By LIZ HUGHES Times Staff

A 500-boat marina proposed for Sidney harbor will destroy wildlife, ruin a beach and cause pollution, a spokesman for a group of residents said today.

guments and a lawyer, the group will take on Island View Marina Ltd., the developers of the proposed marina, at a public hearing Monday night in Sidney council

George McAdams, of 9865 Fifth Street, a member of the committee set up to oppose the marina development, said the development will be "det-rimental to the whole area."

"It's not just the people who live along the water, it's all the people in Sidney who use the beach, who should be worried about this," McA-dams said.

"It will cause pollution and stop the use of the beach by hundreds of kids who use it.

"This area is also a big wildlife refuge. Every year we get flocks of black geese, ducks and we even had some swans here last year," McA-dams said.

The proposed marina runs from the government wharf at the foot of Beacon Avenue about three-quarters of a mile along the watefront to Henry

The marina developers, Pat Stewart and George Stricker, co-owners of Island View Marina Ltd., have heard all the opposition to their plan

About a year ago Sidney council refused them permission to develop the marina after a public hearing, but

Stewart said today the main objection to the plan has been overcome.

were just going to extend the existing breakwater and we found out that the tides wouldn't be able to flush the water out of the basin if we did that," Stewart said.

"Now the plan calls for a shorter breakwater, farther from the shore that will allow the water to get in and out.' Stewart said he met with the residents opposed to the marina last week and had an "amiable" meeting.

"We've done everything we can to let them know what's happening and to explain what we're doing," he said.

Another objection to the original plan, Stewart said, was people along the waterfront were afraid they would lose their view because of the breakwater.

"Our breakwater now is 270 feet away from the low water line at its closest point and most of it will be 600 feet from the water line."

"Frankly, I don't think the beach will be affected at all and I think the breakwater will help cut down the erosion on the shore.'

A Seminar for Anything

By I. H. ASPER

last decade has witnessed the phenomenon of back-to-school conferences for businessmen, executives and their financial, corporate, legal, accounting and other advisers.

The winter months are characterized by Marketing Conferences in Las Vegas, Conferences on corporate acquisitions and mergers in Miami and Small Business Diversification seminars in Hawaii.

The big push comes over the summer months. The eager students crowd the Banff School to learn new estate planning techniques; Jasper Lodge conference halls of women in the executive. washrooms; the Murray Bay and Seignory clubs, the Muskoka lodges and the less congested business administration schools on all the leading campuses to exchange ideas on new technology, new investment instruments, overseas sales opportunities and what have you.

Clearly most of this is healthy as part of keeping business decision-makers up to date and informed.

However, there opens today one of the most unique of all business oriented conferences. It is the Conference on Bank Secrecy in Switzerland and

But it is a virtual certainty that there will be a proliferation of such seminars and the Canadian participants will increase in number.

The number of international fiscal, economic and taxation associations has increased considerably as international trade has boomed. Until re-cently international business has been the private preserve of huge conglomerates and of nuge conglomerates and multinational corporations. Not so, any longer. It is not unusual today to find a small manufacturing enterprise in Winnipeg selling goods to Cuba, and it is clearly in Canada's best interests to encourage such effotrs.

Today's bank secrecy conference follows a similiar con-ference last month in Paris, called the International Tax Haven Conference. Nearly 200 delegates from 35 countries eagerly listened while lec-turers described the wonders of reducing tax on profits or investment income by establishing companies and trusts in the growing number of tax-free countries. Delegates studied the advantages of Bermuda, the Bahamas, the Netherland Antilles, Grand Cayman, New He-brides, The Channel Islands,

If he invests his saving at 10 per cent interest, he'll pay half of his interest in taxes, leaving him a five per cent after-tax gain. If inflation runs at 10 per cent, not only is his gain wiped out, but his capital has been reduced by five per cent. If he keeps that up for a number of years his capital will be destroyed. But if he moves his capital to a tax haven, makes the identical investment, receives the same yield, he doubles his after-tax return because there is no tax. The result: he beats inflation as the destroyer of his savings.

It is true that the government of Canada cannot alone contain inflation overnight, but it is equally true that the government can do something about taxes.

And it is a likelihood that unless it does, the exodus of savings from Canada to tax havens will intensify and Canada will suffer a decrease of both capital and tax revenue. Those proliferating tax avoidance conferences aren't dealing in theory, they're teaching reality.

N.Z. Tightens Strings On Immigration Policy

By J. C. GRAHAM CP Correspondent

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) New Zealand's new immigration restraints have precipitated an unprecedented rush to gain New Zealand citizenship.

Until now, any Common-wealth citizen of European ancestry has been able to enter the country without restriction and to live in New Zealand for any length of time without work permit or

Soaring immigration fig-ures, however, especially from Britain, and even larger queues in London waiting to migrate have brought

Entry permits now are needed by all but New Zealand and Australian citizens. Holders of other passports living in New Zealand at the time the restrictions were introduced will be able to get re-entry permits merely by every time they leave the flood of new applications will

And in spite of assurances. some feel the regulations might be further tightened at some future time, oreating further problems in returning.

The new restrictions chiefly affect nationals of Britain and Canada. Aliens and Common-wealth citizens of other than European ancestry were al-ready under various forms of entry control.

OFFICES BUSY

As a result of the new provisions, 2,289 citizenship appli-cations were received in the first week of April alone from Britons and Canadians living in New Zealand. This was about the total number of citizenship applications normally received from all sources in a full year.

By contrast, only a few more than 50 applications were received in the same week from people of other na-tionalities seeking citizenship. It is not known how long the take to process. Each application must be approved by the minister of internal affairs

The basis of entry now is that visitors receive permits for a six-months stay with a minimum of formality. But entry for permanent settle-ment will be governed by much stricter criteria than in the past.

Even Commonwealth citizens seeking permanent entry must be in good health, of good character, aged between 18 and 45, with no more than four dependent children and with skills specifically needed in New Zealand. There are exceptions on humanitarian and similar grounds.

The basic aim of the new restraints is to reduce the recent net immigration gain of about 30,000 a year by half.

Planning a Dream Garden

reaches the age of 50 with lessened family responsibilities, a comfortable home, and a few spare dollars that could reasonably be invested some garden improvements.

By that time, it is not unusual for many of us to have a definite plan for our dream garden, and we see the opporto change this dream into reality.

The dreams started when energy was abundant and ex-perience limited, and were somewhat modified as energy decreased and knowledge im-

Up to this point we believed that time and unexpected demands on the budget were the only barriers to progress, but from now on we shall discover another factor which requires serious consideration.

This factor is decreasing

Our dream garden was con-ceived in the past, but the reality will have to be tended in the future. Shall we have the physical ability to do the necten years time?

Through the fifties we find pleasure in digging, cultivating, pruning, mowing, and making compost. Five hundred spring flowering bulbs planted in the fall and 50 dozen bedding plants setout in spring give us colorful beds and borders and a justifiable

Ten years later we realize sometimes with alarm, that a job that was easy last year has become difficult, or almost impossible, this year. It is then we see the faults in the plan we so carefully worked out in the previous reduce the amount of labor; one is to employ a gardener to maintain the status quo, the other to rebuild the garden along labor saving lines.

If we are not faced with a fixed or diminishing income, the employed gardener may be the solution, although we oon discover that competent trained gardeners are rapidly becoming an extinct species, and the few still in existence have heavy demands on their services.

The alternative, to rebuild the garden, may seem the easiest way out, but here again labor will be needed to assist with digging, rootingout, and replanting, plus a cash outlay for the kind of plants that will more or less look after themselves.

Another factor at the threealization that time is of the essence, that we cannot wait ten to twenty years to see our beauty.

purchasing large plants al-ready nearing maturity, but when we enquire the price, when we enquire the price, and learn that moving large specimens is an expensive major operation, it is obvious the budget cannot be stretched that far.

Then it slowly dawns on us that the type of garden we are capable of handling and enjoying, should have been built at least ten years previously. Had that been done the

There is little we can do at this stage except to give up the garden, and that is the very last thing we want to accept as the solution. We have to admit the present situation is the result of past mistakes.

My work constantly brings me into contact with gar-deners sixty years and over whose existence is frustration, fatigue, and failure, because it is physically impossible to keep abreast of the work.

While there is little I can suggest that would be helpful to these people, I would be remiss if I failed to warn others of what lies ahead.

We hear so many say they are looking forward to retirement and spending their time in their garden, I cannot help but wonder how many of these have prepared for retirement. these have prepared for retir-ing to the garden, and what percentage will find their cherished hopes attainable.

If you are one of this group I suggest you critically analyze your garden. Find the things that involve the most labor and consume the most time. Eliminate these as soon as possible.

Reduce the area of lawn, the most time consuming feature of any garden. Replace beds of annual flowers with shrubs that will grow in beauty and be able to main-tain themselves in ten years. Start now that corner you have dreamed about where you will be able to relax and enjoy your retirement leisure.

Plan your garden along lines that seem to you now, in your prime, the kind of garden the laziest man in the world would design. When you pass sixty you will find this kind of garden all you wish to handle.

Remember that gardening is to be your hobby, and a hobby is something that provides pleasant occupation, mental and physical relax-ation, and a sense of accomplishment.

No garden will fit this defi-nition unless it is planned and built to be a hobby garden. And the time to build it is now while you still have the ambi-fine dutys and partial actil tion, drive, and physical ability to do the necessary heavy Bulldozers have not yet ripped out the vital area west of Uplands Park. But watch carefully for Monday Night's Council Meeting. Only speculators, some at 40 Wall Street, New York, may derive satisfaction from that meeting if Council approves bulldozing of the area. The end result will be an asphalt street, lawns, driveways, cars, and large houses along the park's ¼ mile west boundary.

Council has listened well to the demands of owner speculators, but what of OUR interests as a community? Must we permit them to degrade our major park? Is such critical property not worth a small increase in taxes? If you agree the property should be bought out to preserve the integrity of the park area, please come to the council meeting. A huge attendance in support of the idea should demonstrate to council that Oak Bay residents are prepared to buy LAND for the community.

Price Silences Thunder

By JIM CRERAR Times Staff

Victoria Cougar fans will see more of the prairie teams, less of the Coast teams and nothing at all of Thunder Bay

Thunder Bay decided the Western Canada Hockey League wanted too much — $100,000 — for a franchise and said no thanks.

It was one of several decisions to come out of Friday's meeting of WCHL governors at the Imperial Inn. Delegates also awarded the league allstar game next January to Victoria, settled on realignment of the eastern and western divisions and devised a formula for selecting a WCHL all-star team to play in the World Junior Tournament Dec. 26-Jan. 5 in Winnipeg. The Thunder Bay delega-tion, headed by lawyer Jim Johnson, went into Friday's meeting figuring they had eight votes in their favor among the 12 league teams and that the asking price would be about $65,000.

The price turned out to be $100,000. However, the WCHL proposal asked for only $40,000 down and $20,000 over each of the next three years. Thunder Bay didn't seek to draft present WCHL players, proposing to go instead with talent from the Thunder Bay travel subsidy. However, as assurance that Thunder Bay interests would not buy into the league, then re-sell the club at a quick profit, the governors wanted the right to buy back the franchise at the price they sold it.

"I want to make it abundantly clear that we usually don't give out such details to the press," said Ed Chynoweth of Saskatoon, WCHL president. "We are doing so this year because it was Thunder Bay's refusal and not the WCHL's that resulted in their not entering. their not entering.

There still will be two divisions of six teams each. Lethbridge Broncos, who moved from Swift Current at the end of last season, will be in the eastern section with Saskatoon Blades, Regina Pats, Flin Flon Bombers, Brandon Wheat Kings and Winnipeg Clubs. That leaves the Cougars, New Westminster Bruins, Kamloops Chiefs, Edmonton Oil Kings Calcary. monton Oil Kings, Calgary Centennials and Medicine Hat Tigers in the west.

The Cougars will play each prairie team three times at home next season instead of twice, as in the past. They'll also make three appearances in each Prarie city. To allow for the increase, Victoria will play New Westminster and Kamloops eight times — four at home and four away — instead of 10.

Obviously considering natural rivalries, delegates also voted to increase to 10 the number of schedule games beween Saskatoon and Regina. Medicine Hat and Leth-bridge, Calgary and Edmon-

The big news for victoria, as revealed by worth president Ed Chynoweth, took Friday's play away from a hectic day of business at the annual meeting in the Imperial Inn.

The all-star game, matching the best in the east against the western division's top players, will be held at Memorial Arena in January. The exact date will probably be settled at Ginnell secretly worked two months to draw up a sixpage bid. He dropped it into the governors' laps Friday and Chynoweth said it was a "fantastic presentation."

Medicine Hat Tigers and Lethbridge Broncos also planned to bid for the game, which annually attracts virtually every professional scout in the land,

"As soon as they heard Ginnell's presentation," said Chynoweth, "Lethbridge and Medicine Hat withdrew their bids and it went to Victoria unanimously."

Included in Ginnell's all-star proposals: An all-star dinner at the Empress Hotel with a promise of an outstanding array of hockey celebrities; player awards; between-period entertainment, possibly a "Shoot Out" involving former National Hockey League stars.

While the all-star game was the major blast, there was one other bit of news slipping out of the corriders that would interest Victoria fans.

It has been learned, but not confirmed by Ginnell, that interest Victoria fans.

It has been learned, but not confirmed by Ginnell, that Victoria has re-acquired defenceman Kim Claekson from Flin Flon Bombers. It was a three-way deal.

Flin Flon traded Clackson to New Westminster Bruins in exchange for a highly-rate U.S. player from Minnesota. Then the Bruins dealt the rugged Clackson to the Cougars for the rights to Fred Berry, last year's rookie-of-the-year and leading scorer in the B.C. Junior L'eague.

More official, and confirmed, is the selection of the WCHL to represent Canada in the international junior world tournament to be held in Winnipeg Dec. 26-Jan. 5.

Each league team will supply its two top players. Selection will be handled by Bill Burton of Lethbridge and Scotty Munro of Calgary, named Friday as manager and coach, respectively, of the WCHL team.

Girls Will Be Boys -It's Come to That!

So now it's panty-girdles to go with jock straps. Little League has blown its cover and knuckled under. Girls are going to be allowed to play in a boys' league. The libbers have won out. The establishment has been destroyed.

It Little League president Peter McGovern had not issued the fateful executive order last week, it would have come anyway. The U.S. courts have ruled that girls will be boys when it comes to baseball.

be boys when it comes to baseball.

Big deal! But then I suppose fair is fair. If the girls want to play let them register. In that way they get on a team. Then it's up to the manager. He's supposed to treat all players alike. But will he? Or she?

Yes, "she". In Little League it used to be that dad took Willie to the ball park, and remained to become a manager, or a coach. But now when mom brings Daisy . . . hoo, boy that could be when the fuzz hits the fan. But fair's still falr. And if Daisy can hack it, fine. Who knows? There may be a slugger in skirts up the street, or a rifle arm, or someone built like a backstop with a batting average to match. Surely, they should be scouted. After all, there is a great future in sport . . . money . . . prestige . . .

Sharing the Priorities

And if Mom thinks Daisy's got it, fellows, she's got it. And by cracky, if it is an integral part of Little League that a parent not only take his youngster to the park, but remain to be a coach or a manager, will mom oblige as well? You bet. Managing isn't solely a man's right, is it? And besides, who else is going to make sure that Daisy gets to first base?

McGovern calls the new order social change. Maybe he should have renamed Little League, Baseball for Kidpersons It's co-ed by any title, But don't knock it. Other sports are Ms oriented, what ever that means. There are women jockeys. Not many. But they've been accepted. The gals are getting bigger in motor sport as well. They are competing against men in some areas, and no longer are banned from the pits.

Soccer is a girls' sport in Europe, and it's not true that the chest pass has been banned. Rowing has been popular for women in European countries for some time, and is catching on quickly in North America. It's already co-ed. When Darkmouth recently won a pairs with cox event, it was a mixed crew. The pairs were males, the cox a girl.

In basketball, volleyball, softball, team sports, the girls deserve their place, and some are very good. The same could be said for individual competitions — tennis, bowling, sking, golf, you name it. If girls want to play, compete, or whatever,

But in baseball, does anyone really want this co-ed approach? Met manager Yogi Berra said it for a lot of guys: "let them play softball."

Were the Boys Asked?

Besides, were the boys asked if they minded if the girls moved in? They were not. And shouldn't they have some rights? Would any of them be accepted into a girls' league? They would not. They would be laughed off the block, if notright out of court. And cripes, who wants to be struck out - by a girl!

Still, fair's fair. And T guess if the girls take over the boys' chores — take out the garbage, cut and trim the lawn, dig the garden, clean the eavestroughs, empty the ashes, cut the wood for the fireplace (kids still do that don't they?) then why shouldn't they have some fun. After they've done the dishes of course.

Frankly, I really don't think there are too many girls who can qualify for Little League, Farm League perhaps. That's a few years younger, and something else. Half the kids never handled a baseball before, and the other half only know what their dads told them. And the coaches soon change that. As for girls, most of them only know what their mothers told them, and every boy should know what kind of trouble that Oh, well. Times change, if kids don't.

Jim Taylor of the Sun, summed it up best when he penned: "Girls are just boys who talk funny." They sure do, and it doesn't end with Little League

But, fair's fair, remember, and even if the kids may be all right, it doesn't answer the main question:
"Who's going to platoon the mothers?"
Well?

To Endure the Present We Must Link with Past

By PAT BARCLAY

It you've been a resident of Canada this past spring, you can hardly have failed to notice that Margaret Laurence has published a new novel. It's her fifth, It's called The Diviners, and the enthusiasm of her publishers is so unbounded they've arranged the simultaneous release of a small LP recording of four songs from the story.

One of the main characters in The Diviners is the heroine's Metis lover, Jules (Skinner) Tennerre, who earns his living singing in clubs and coffeehouses and writes his own songs, about his own people, when he can. Three of these songs are on the recording; the fourth is by his young daughter. What the music tells us is essentially what the novel tells us, also: Life is hell, but a good man (or woman) does what he can. His example does more than inspire, it teaches the rest of us how to survive.

In Margaret Laurence's hands the familiar theme of survival is enacted not through physical battle against hostile or uncaring nature but through psychological struggle inside individual consciousness. In the second half of the 20th century, our perils are largely man-made. Whether we survive them depends on how much inner strength we have managed to acquire. And there is rething to accurate to acquire. And there is nothing, Laurence shows us, which dispenses inner strength more surely than faith in the strength of one's ancestors.

Ancestor worship has long been something of a North American joke. How many Europeans, do you suppose, have earned a living from the North American need for genealogy? (Once in Aberdeen, where I lived for these happy years of forced two lived for three happy years, we were offered two "ancestral portraits" by Scottish friends who had recently bought an old house. They had found them hidden away in the basement, and being already plentifully supplied with ancestors of their own, dared us to admit we wanted them for ourselves. We did, of course. You can hardly have too many ancestors, and the pictures made a strong appeal to the imagination. But we couldn't bear behaving like typical North Americans at that point in time, so the offer had to be refused. I've been sorry ever since.)

What writers like Laurence and Robertson Davies tell us in their books is that the joke is over. What was once a scramble for worthless prestige, the need to be considered "somebody," has become a form of life incan endure the present and prepare ourselves for the future, for knowledge of continuity before our own time brings faith in continuity after it.

There's more than this in The Diviners; it's nearly There's more than this in The Diviners; it's nearly 400 pages long and Morag Gunn, the protagonist, covers a lot of ground. She begins in Manawaka, where she grows up aliented from most of the town, half-loving, half-hating her step-parents for their differentness. (Christie Logan, her step-father, is the fown garbage collector. He drinks and he stinks, but he also thrills her with legendary tales of Piper Gunn, her dauntless forbear who led his perishing flock to a new life in the New World.) new life in the New World.)

at last Morag escapes to university, only to marry at 19 and be trapped in a Toronto doll's house. But after nine years (and publication of her first novel) she escapes, and sets about bringing up her child alone in Vancouver. There's a pilgrimage to England and Scotland, and the final inevitable return, in her 40s, to something very like her own backyard.

It's a life in panorama, made all the more sweeping by Laurence's technique of telling Morag's story in the present, interrupted by episodes from the past labelled "Memorybank Movie." There are many openings for side themes and diversions in such a scheme, and Laurence anyears to have entered them all and Laurence appears to have entered them all.

We encounter observations on generation gaps, old and new pioneers, the creative process, women's lib, race prejudice, sex and the single woman, child-rearing, ecology, etc. We are reintroduced to several characters from the earlier novels. Powerful symbols the river, the water diviner, the valley and the mountain weave through the many threads, binding them

And to top it all, the plot has an atmosphere of mythic suggestibility that should be the delight of Canlit studies for years to come. It's an enormously ambitious book and a wide-open-hearted one; it's both canny and humanitarian at the same time - like an enlightened Scotsman, one is tempted to add.

And yet Morag's life, as I've described it, is only half the story. The other half belongs to Jules Tonnerre, the Manawaka Metis whose ancestor fought at Batoche. Like Morag's step-father Christie, Jules's father Lazarus has kept alive the memory of the past. It lives on in both families, as an oral tradition passed to

And in the stories which Morag tells her daughter about Christie, or in the song which Jules sings about' Lazarus, we learn how legends are made. The day-to-day ugliness of each man's life becomes no more than

It's all rather sentimental, I guess, and someone more hardboiled might describe it as corny, but it's certainly the kind of inspiration modern man needs. It's too early to tell right now, but maybe, practically singlehanded, Margaret Laurence has just effected the return of the Hero

Prairie Poet Stirs Memories

By GEORGE WOODCOCK

Two years ago the House of Anansi published a remarkable anthology — Mindscapes edited by Ann Wall — which contained the work of only four poets, all of them young, none of them well-known, and all of them of interesting and original winds. Data Windsch nal minds: Dale Zieroth, Paulette Jiles, Susan Musgrave and Tom Wayman. Last year all four published books of poetry (all but Susan Musgrave for the first time), and, by that magnetic attraction that seems to draw Canadian poets westward, three out of the four — Wayman, Musgrave and Zieroth, are now living in British Columbia.

Zieroth's Clearing: Poems from a Journey is a fine and memorable first book. Dale Zieroth is 27; for the last two or three years those who know what is being written in Canada have noted his presence as one of a group of younger poets who are writing strong and straightforward discursive poems, and who are turning again to those philosophic themes of man and his relation to his fellows and to the natural world which over the centuries poatry has constantly relations. ral world which over the centuries poatry has constantly rei-

Zieroth is especially interesting as one of the first group of really good poets to emerge from the Canadian prairies. Until recently we have looked on the prairies as producing splendid fiction — Grove and Sinclair Ross and Martha Ostenso, W. O. Mitchell and Margaret Laurence — but little in the way of significant poetry.

It seemed as if the large open form of prose narrative was needed to encompass those great spaces and the kind of living they demanded. Canadian poets flourished in Montreal and Ontario, in the Maritimes and on the West Coast, but

Interesting poets on the prairies in those day's were likely to be people from other parts of Canada — like James Reaney in Winnipeg and Dorothy Livesay in Edmonton who went there to teach for a few years and then depart, or immigrants from Britain like Peter Stevens and Stephen Scobie

The first important poet who emerged as a native from the experience and traditions of the prairies was John Newlove, with his nostalgic lyrics of desolate prairie towns and his poems of hitchhiking which evoked the strange mixture of tedium and wonder that comes from travelling casually over the creat plaine.

But now, during the las three or four years, a whole group of poets has emerged who write directly from the prairie experience and are shaping a western (as distinct from ultramontane and coastal) kind of verse just as Grove and Ross and Ostenso shaped a western kind of fiction. Among them are Sid Marty and Andrew Sukanaski and — for me the most interesting — Dale Zieroth.

Zieroth comes from a small community north of Win-Zieroth comes from a small community north of Winnipeg. His grandfather came from Germany to start the family farm, and was interned as an alien in the Second World War. Dale Zieroth himself left Manitoba for Toronto where he worked at various tasks for the CBC, and eventually abandoned the uncongenial city and travelled across Canada looking for a place where he could feel it possible to live with satisfaction. Tentatively, he has found it in the Rocky Mountain Trench, at Windermere near the source of the Columbia, in a decaying pioneer region between two ranges of mountains?

Clearing, Zieroth's first book' of verse, is sub-titled 'Poems from a Journey'; the journey is in time, from Manitoba into the city where he remembers his youth in that lost land, and then across the vast spaces to the protective enclosure of the great mountains, so different from the flat land in which he grew up. They are intensely personal poems, dealing with the experience of the writer and his family. In this respect they belong to the literature of immigration:

went white as buffalo bones and the underwear froze on the line like corpses. Often the youngest was sick, Still he never thought of leaving. Spring was always groups. was sick. Stin he never mought of leaving. Spring was always greener than he'd known and summer had kid-high grass with sunsets big as God. The wheat was thick, the log house chinked and warm.

In a way, Zieroth does for the prairies what Al Purdy has done for Loyalist Ontario. But Zieroth is no imitator of Purdy; he lacks Purdy's flair for clowning and knows it. But he does have what is needed for a true prairie poet not merely a sense of space, but also a strong recollective faculty. Even more than in other parts of Canada one is aware in Manitoba and Saskatchewan of history burning at both ends, of a veritable infant mortality among communities. When my father emigrated to Manitoba 65 years ago many of the small towns were hardly more than a decade. many of the small towns were hardly more than a decade old, and the Red River Rising was less than 40 years in the past. By the 1970's, a man's life later, these towns have gone through their cycle and are dying, and Zieroth catches the feeling with a true and intense ear

Yet, there is more to Clearings than prairie history; for the story is that of men as well as land, and of an experi-ence that has come to many Canadians in recent years; a self-discovery through discovering the land as it is and not as we have always feared it to be Zieroth states it as well as anyone can in the last poem of his book,

Top Soloists For Symphony

It's just possible that the season ahead for Victoria Symphony patrons may turn out to be the best on record.

A brilliant group of soloists will appear and an exceptional range of music is to be per-formed under the direction of Laszlo Gati. There is some emphasis on the music of France for the 1974-75 season the orchestra's 34th

This is in acknowledgement the birth centenary of French composer Maurice Ravel who was born in March, 1875.

Renowned French pianist Phillipe Entremont and violinist Christian Ferras, are among those-scheduled to appear, the former at the sec-ond concert in October and Ferras in February.

Some of Ravel's great com-positions, such as the Concerto for the Left Hand and the G Major Piano Concerto the Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2 and Tzigane, as well as De-bussy's Afternoon of a Faun are included in Gati's music

A number of fine Russian artists are on the roster, headed by the fabulous Mstislav Rostropovich. The cellist was scheduled to play here a couple of seasons ago but came under a Soviet ban against travel abroad because of his championship of the Nobel prize novelist, Solzhenitsyn. The ban has now been lifted.

Soviet pianist Nicolai Petrov and violinist Igo Oistrakh are also coming. From the United States, there will be virtuoso cellist Lawrence Lesser and his brilliant violin-ist wife, Masuko Ushioda, both of whom were highlights of recent seasons.

Although he can do glass and tubing sections well, Nilsson has not progressed much past the level of second-year doodling. His content is empty and redundant. He is not an originator or a visionary, only an able image-collector, so he is not really an artist

In his drawing only, he gets way from stereotyped

Even with these disturbing elements, the combined show is quite a good one. Nilsson's technique is competent, and Russell's content, dedication, to capture the viewer is rare is definitely an experience.

European Security Charter Bogged Down in Difficulties

GENEVA (WP) - The 35and Co-operation in Europe, which has been working here for nine months on a charter tence, is likely to recess this serious differences unresolved.

The problems reflect both he practical difficulties of writing a complex political document that would be acceptable to so many countries, as well as the imponderables on the international scene - the upcoming U.S.-Soviet summit and the governmental uncertainties in Western Europe and Washington, among others.

Some Western delegates are even calling the conference deadlocked. United States negotiators believe this is an overly gloomy view. But then the U.S. all along has expected less from the conference than have some of its allies, on the one hand, and the Soviet Union, on the other.

Moscow still believes the conference will formally seal Europe into East and West something, it has already largely achieved in recent ties. The smaller Western Euan states in particular regard the conference as a rare

The conference has convened last summer in Helsinki by foreign ministers from every country in Europe except Albania, plus the Unit-ed States and Canada.

The working stage began here in the fall with some 600 delegates meeting in the halls and corners of the new Inter-national Conference Centre. They sought to formulate a tions relating to security in Europe; co-operation in the fields of economics, of science and technology and of the environment, and co-operation countries.

As the contested points mul-tiplied, Soviet sources said, some Western Europeans even suspended the informal private contacts ... in which much of the bargaining goes on. Western Europeans assert that in some portions of the text, of the proposed charter, the Soviets refused to consider Western positions

During the International tournament in Paris in 1927, Dr. Alekhine had all the contestants up to his botel suite. He had just returned from his world title match with Jose Raoul Capabilanca, which was held in Buenos Aires and which Alekhine won. After a special rapid transit tournament, I asked Alekhine if there was anyone in the world who could take the title away from him. He smilingly replied "None! I am the greatest!"

This reminded me of the story told about William Steinitz and Johnnes Hermann Zuckertort. At a banquet in Vienna in 1865 the speaker told the audience, "And now I would like you to meet the future champion of the world," and both Steinitz and Zuckertort stood up!! In its over-all pursuit of detente, the Nixon administra-tion apparently regards this conference as little more than a means of rhetorically softening the atmosphere of East-West relations, with the substantive bargaining on military, political, economic substantive and humanitarian questions going on in smaller forums.

For example, the United States has never made much of a fuss about the conference, ami its existence is handly noted in Washington. The U.S. delegation is small, only about 10 in all, compared to the Soviet delegation which has 100 members and is led by a deputy foreign minister.

The Soviet Union and its allies regard the conference as of the utmost importance.

FAMILY LAW COMMISSION HEARINGS END

Commission on Family and Children's Law completed its province-wide series of hearings this

The commission, which has held hearings in 34 B.C. cities since April, heard discussion on topics ranging from adoption to child abuse.

David Cruikshank, the commission's research director, told the meeting that the working group he is chairman of would like to recommend the legal term "illegitimacy" be abolished.

Cruikshank said 12 per cent of the live births in B.C. are illegitimate, and barriers preventing them from asserting their claims as human beings should be removed.

People at the meeting questioned the clarity of the father's role in existing adoption legislation.

One woman also said the proposed reunion registry that would provide for a child having reached the age of 19 to meet its natural mother with both their consent, would provide no way of stopping the mother from divulging the name of the child's father.

Another woman said a child's relationship with brothers and sisters may be more important than with the natural parents, and said the proposed registry should provide for tracing the child's family.

The commission also heard discussion on legislation to deal with child abuse.

One woman said physicians are most capable of reporting and proving cases of child battering, but said there is nothing legally compelling them to

was an advertising man in Toronto, he went out for a friend and started talking about leaving the rat race.

He was tired of the day to day hassles and the games

So he invented a game of his own called Ratrace. And another one called Ulcers. When no company would buy the idea, he quit the ad game and when into the game game.

Bramalea distributes more than 100 games and puzzles.

The biggest seller is Ratrace, "a madcap game of so-cial climbing." Players start in the lower class and, with status symbols and a little cash or credit, move to the middle and finally the upper class. Object is to get $250,000 in cash and drop out of the. rat race.

Obstacles, include income taxes, credit payments and the cost of living in the higher social strata.

It's a true-to-life game but Mr. Rubbens probably is won-dering if he shouldn't have put the federal government into the picture somewhere.

A government regulation Bill C-180 is creating prob-lems for hundreds of firms that manufacture consumer goods, said Mr. Rubbens-

When the law becomes effective Sept. 1, 1975, it will require that all packages be bilingual and list contents.

Mr. Rubbens said it will cost his firm $50,000 in new packaging / money which would otherwise have gone towards product development. Part of a $175,000 addition

Mr. Rubbens said the firm recently produced an all-French version of Ratrace. Will that have to be scrapped for a bilingual version with the French board on the re-verse side of the English one?

If so, the price of the game will go from $8 to $10 and he predicts many products will be dropped by game and toy manufacturers who cannot af-ford the new color separations and printing required or who mport their games from the U.S. or Europe.

House of Games is a sub-sidiary of John Waddington, the English game maker and many products are imported. The firm opened in 1970 when Mr. Rubbens went into game-making full-time. In July, 1973, it moved from Mississauga to Bramalea and part of the firm was sold to Waddington.

In the present plant, 20 employees assemble and distrib-ute games and puzzles. In the addition, another 20 workers will start House of Games manufacturing its own products, introduced at the rate of one a year.

Most are invented, at least to his plant, which will open, in part, by Mr. Rubbens, who

Welsh beauties . . .

Welsh beauties . . .

It's with the greatest pleasure that we welcome the Welsh Hand Loom to this column today! . . Actually we'd planned on telling you about it last December, but you know what happened . Well, this week we had another look around . . . after having been regaled by several people during the intervening months with accounts of what beautiful things are to be found there, and how reasonable prices are . And it's all absolutely true! . . Clothes are all Welsh tapestry woven in pure wool . . in gorgeously-subtle color combinations you have to see to believe! . Because they come directly from Wales to the Nootka Court shop without benefit of agent or intermediary, prices are able to be kept remarkably low for such fine merchandise . . Tailored styles include topcoats, suits, jumpers . . short and full-length skirts . . capes, vests and tabards . . These latter are long vests in three different styles . . one buttonless, with patch pockets . . the others fastening with either a. big ornamental clasp, or a lace and eyelets . . Awfully nice to wear with slacks or skirts, with sweater or blouse underneath . . Same fabric used in these garments is also sold by the yard . . a real plus, we think . Then there are purses and hats which can be contrasted, co-ordinated or matched . . and all sorts of Welsh crafts . Welsh Hand Loom, Nootka Court, 634 Humboldt St., 384-7723.

Shorter sweaters look younger, newer than the long, fanny-covering type.

Cool, cool cottons . . .

We're writing this with the sun streaming in on our type-writer . . and isn't it wonderful to be able to luxuriate in warm weather at last? . In view of this we'll skip most of the other exciting things we could tell you about Wilson's and concentrate on the cottons . because there's absolutely nothing cooler than cotton . It launders with the greatest of ease . always looks band-box fresh . Maybe you've noticed that cotton dresses have been none too plentiful in the past couple of years . . This season Wilson's have loads! . There are those beautifully-made McMullen dresses in both long and short-sleeved styles (and long sleeves can actually be cool when the sun's beating down!) . We like the fit as well as the styling of McMullens . Then there are Roadrunner cotton dresses from Arizona . Mostly sleeveless, these . Real pretty and with little touches which make them distinctive . A lot of new cotton shirt blouses by Hathaway . to wear with your slacks, shorts or pantsuits . Some are plain white . Others are windowpane checks or plaids . . Still others have embossed vertical stripes . All tailored to perfection . Other cottons include perky little golf skirts . . Very finely-knit cotton tops from Italy . . in shirt or T-shirt styles . . Swiss cotton scarves in terrific designs and colors to wear over your head or around your neck . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177 and 1210 Oak Bay Ave., 592-2821.

Things have been happening at Miss Frith's . . .

You could have knocked us over with the proverbial feather when we paid our first visit/in many a moon to Miss Frith's on Monday . . We hadn't realized so many things have been happening! . . For one thing, Miss Frith's now have air conditioning . . and if this doesn't make for pleasant shopping, we don't know what does . . Honestly, the whole store is more inviting than we ever remember seeing it before . . and that's saying an awful lot! . . The sportswear area has been greatly enlarged . . and it's chockful of summer co-ordinates and summer dresses . As for blouses, shells and pant tops, don't think we've ever seen a more comprehensive selection in our life! . . So if by some miracle you can't find exactly what you've set your heart on here, you might just as well forget it! . . Be sure to look at the swimsuits . . biggest and finest selection in town . . in all well-known makes . . And for you gals who wear uniforms . . nurses, hairdressers, waitresses, etc. . . . there's a brand new uniform department at Miss Frith's on the mezzanine of their junior shop . . Every kind of uniform you can think of . . pantsuits . . separate pants . . separate tops . . in pure white and a host of colors . . . White stockings, pantyhose and knee-highs . . even white uniform shoes for nurses and such . . . Very smart styles with composition or cork soles . . Miss Frith Fashions, 1619 Douglas St., 383-7181.

Just this week we saw a long blue denim dress trimmed with colored "jewels"... Very young and striking!

How to settle your storage problems.

You know how it is when you live in a small apartment never enough storage space to stow things away in . . . let alone shelf space to hold your books and bibelots . . And if you live in a rented house, you can't go banging nails in the wall or installing built-in furniture! . There's a solution to this though, as we realized when we saw the big new shipment of Scandinavian portable storage units in Standard Furniture's Import Shop the other day . . Free-standing pieces which can be grouped in dozens of different ways . . And they're so diversified . . so many different types and sizes . . not only functional but extremely smart and elegant-looking . They'll give a custom look to the most commonplace room . . change the shape, the whole atmosphere! . As we said, units come in all sizes and shapes . . There are sliding and regular door cupboards, chests, open adjustable shelves . . drawers both large and small . . . units with drop leaf or pull-out tops which can be used as desk, bars or serving units . . invaluable when you want to serve a buffet supper in small surroundings! . . There are units to hold your favorite books . . . your TV and radio . . shelves to display your trinkets and ornaments . . In fact there's just no end to what you can do with these teak (or white) units . . . and even a small grouping can make for an interesting room area. . . See them at . . . Lots of new things at Charmante's . . .

If we were about to take off on a trip around the world . . . the first thing we'd buy is the 4-pce suit which arrived at Charmante's this week . . and which we promptly dubbed "The Traveller" . It's a light weight beige wool with pleated skirt, straight-cut pants, longish collarless belted jacket, and a long sleeved black pullover with a few beige and white stripes in different widths . Styled by Mario Romano, the jacket closes with antique gilt buttons on which the designer's initials are entwined in an ornamental effect . $255 seemed to us a reasonable price for this versatile outfit! . . Charmante's have just received a new shipment of Ports blouses in a very good color range, including royal blue, saffron, caramel, lemon ice, green, etc. . They've also got some new Bleyle skirts in wool blends . Pleated houndstooth checks in navy or brown and white . shades of grey in overchecks . . plain grey or navy skirts . . With blazers in navy, charcoal, black, light grey and brown . Long skirts from Bleyle too . . . We noticed an excellent selection of Spindrift raincoats . hand-washable crinkle nylon which resist rain and wind . keep you cool when it's hot and vice-versa because they're insulated. Wonderful for that one coat to take on your travels! . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 385-1543. Lots of new things at Charmante's.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

Some of the most unhappy parents I know are those who have an atuistic child. Autism is a disease which causes a child to be emotionally cut off from everyone, even his parents; he seems to be repulsed by all human contact, and unable to respond to talk-ing or affection. He may spend many hours each day repeating a few ritualistic movements over and over again, and he may scream like an animal if he is dis-

I have on my desk a book called ::The Ultimate Stranger: The Autistic Child, A Revolutionary Approach," by Dr. Carl H. Delacato (Doubleday, 1974). Dr. Delacato's ideas sound sensible, and he should know whereof he speaks, because he has studied widely in a number of fields, such as psychology, anthropology, ed-ucation, and the treatment of brain-injured children.

An important idea that Dr. Delacato has is that often-times autistic children are considered to be psycho-tic, and he feels that this is not the case.

His experience with such children has given him the impression that their strange behavior is due to the fact they are brain-damaged in such a way that they cannot they are brain-damaged in such a way that they cannot attend to the world around them, because their sense organs do not work properly. They do not see, hear, smell, or feel the world as the rest of us do, and as a result their world is a confusing and frightening place.

' Some of these children are overly-sensitive; their sponses to the world are "bigger than life," and far too strong or exaggerated. Others do not receive strong enough messages in their brain to react normally. Still others are so distracted by the inner workings of their bodies that they simply cannot pay attention to anyone or anything outside. Obviously, with these sensory distortions, it is hard for anyone to understand

Dr. Delacato tells how he worked with the parents of the autistic children that were brought to him at the Insti-tutes for the Achievement of Human Potential in Philadelphia, trying to discover in each case what special sensory problems the child had.

For example, Dr. Delacato learned that children with too keen a sense of vision often do a lot of rocking, spinning or twirling, or will spend many hours fascinated by moving objects such as automobiles, clocks with visibly turning parts, or records spinning. Some of these children have an amazing memory, and can sometimes recite Shake-spearean plays, the telephone book, or automobile licenses with almost total recall.

Children with a faulty sense of vision, who do not receive enough visual stimulation (called hypovisual, hypo meaning too little) are likely to rock constantly back and forth, watching an object as it moves closer and farther away. They also are fascinated by light, and may some-times do their eyes harm by staring for a long time at the sun or a very bright light.

Still other children have the powerful sense of smell of an animal like a dog, and are aware of odors that people with a normal sense of smell do not notice. These children can smell a person's breath or skin, or even his footprints; they can smell the odors of clothing, especially clothing made of synthetic fabrics, and many of the odors that beseige them all day are repulsive too them. If a (to them) bad-smelling person tries to come close, these children may vomit.

Autistic children with other Autistic children with other sensory defects behave in different ways. For example, one girl kept biting her hands all day, and Dr. Delacato found that she could not feel much of anything, so the feeling she got when she bit herself was familiar, and reassurself was familiar and reassuring to her.

In this case, Dr. Delacato was able to stop the biting by stimulating the girl's skin with rubbing and massaging, putting her hands in cold and hot water, even lightly sand-ing her hands with coarse sandpaper until her ability to feel became more normal, and she did not need the self-harmful way of stimulating her sense of feeling. Now she does not bite her hands, beior. When relieved of their cause if she did, she says, "It

Walt's Band Plays On For Free

TORONTO (CP) — Success for Walter Kingsley Ottaway lies in making his audience

For more than 60 years, Mr. Ottaway has been mass-tro of the orchestra he found-ed in 1933, but it hasn't earned him a dime.

"Some guys enjoy golf," he says. "I've always made music for fun, never money."

The only concession he makes to his 87 years is to sit on a stool as he leads the orchestra through rehearsals. "Touch of arthritis, y'know. Very arroving."

Very annoying."

He came to Toronto from England in 1910 at the age of 23. He already could play the violin, trumpet, piano and banjo, as well as the organ. His first job was as an organ tester in Woodstock, Ont.

He still plays the organ every day in his Toronto apartment and often sings to his wife, Lily, whom he married 62 years ago.

After his marriage, Walter had an urge to become a professional musician, but he remembers "in those days you and to be extremely lucky to had to be extremely lucky to earn $20 a week as a musician. I'd also become interested in real estate by that time and I stayed with it for the rest of my working life,"

U.S. Gov't 'Ignores' Nutrition

WASHINGTON (WP) U.S. Senate hunger hearings concluded Friday with a sweeping accusation of Nixon administration indifference to a national nutrition policy.

"Isn't there someone at the White House or somewhere in the federal government who knows we face a serious nutritional problem?" asked Sen. George Mcgovern (D - S.D.), chairman of the Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs, sponsor of the three-day hearings.

His question was prompted by the report of an advisory Lead Test panel on nutrition and government headed by Harvard nutritionist Mark Hegsted. The report contained the following observations:

"Nobody in the Executive Office of the President is in charge of the nutrition policy

Natural Gas Price Up

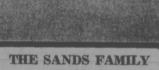

WASHINGTON (UPI) The Federal Power Commission voted 4 to 1 Friday to establish a uniform national base rate for natural gas that could double monthly gas bills

The FPC; blaming a serious shortage of the gas used pri-marily for cooking and home heating, set a national base price for natural gas at 42 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

The president of the American Gas Association, Donald Hart, called the increase "half a loaf" and said a higher wellhead rate is also needed wellread rate is also

The new rate applies to all. interstate sales except in Alaska and Hawaii, but covers only gas produced from fields tapped after Jan. 1, 1973. However, the FPC is considering requests for price increases on gas produced from older fields.

PERSPECTIVES, PREJUDICES

The Applause

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Queen Victoria is reported to have said when someone was trying to amuse her and not succeeding, "We are not amused." She was, of course, a very stuffy person—such a typical Victorian! But in her stuffy response there is an element of wisdom. She did epxress her own judgment and she had the courage not to feign amusement when she was not amused.

That kind of courage does not come easily to us. We readily applaud things which do not deserve our applause probably because we feel that willingness to applaud indiscriminately is a sign of tolerance and broadmindedness.

Applause has become a significant force in our life. In the entertainment industry and in politics, too — careers are made and broken by applause and by lack of ap-

Our applause is sometimes measured by machines. And we are often manipulated into offering applause.

Persons in groups can be led to applaud things which very few of them as individu-

Canned applause, along with canned laughter, is often dubbed on to the sound-tracks and used as background support on radio shows.

We sit in our easy chairs and let ourselves be beguided by artificial applause into ac-cepting what we really know to be utter tripe as the fine flower of human creativity. How else can you account for the phenomenal success of some of the televison comedy shows?

We often show amusement and offer applause out of de-sire not to be thought odd, insensitive, puritanical. Applause can be contagious and therein is its peril.

group we associate with or wish to associate with. We easily go along with the jug-ments of individuals and groups of which we stand in awe for some peculiar reason.

And the liberated young man is as prone to this kind of self-victimization as is his Chamber-of-Commerce father - and vice versa. Today we are being subtly forced into conformities of re-sponse and attitude without our being fully aware of the extent to which we are being manipulated. Fortunately, human nature has in it a strain of sheer cussedness, and this keeps soo ety from becoming thoroughly homogenized.

But how many of us really bring individual judgment to bear on our entertainments, on literary and artistic matters, on politics, on religion?

The issue here is that of mature integrity, in being your own man or your own woman in making your judg-ments. St. Paul once prayed that some of his friends would have "the gift of true discrimination." (Philippians 1:10, New English Bible.)

I like that expression.

"True discrimination" is essential to personal maturity. It is something that goes beyond mere conformity and mere nonconformity, some-thing that goes right to the heart of personal integrity and fulfilment.

The Validity of Judaism

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Southern Presbyterians are moving toward a revamped declaration of belief which

In a first step toward authorizing it, the governing as-sembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S., a southern body, voted to relay the declaration to local presbyteries for their reactions. It then comes back before the assembly next year for legislative decision-making.

At present, the church's basic doctrinal summation is the centuries-old Westminster Confession of 1647. It still would be affirmed, under the ure initiated here, in a

Victoria cab driver Larry Cramer says he's already had public support for his claim that Autoplan's demerit point hits professional

"The long hours and the distractions are bound to show through;" he said.

As a result many professional drivers are having to pay top rates of around $400 for their compulsory drivers' insurance, he said. Cramer is considering lecting support from other professional drivers in the city before going to Transport

"I would have a little more weight and I wouldn't be just Larry Cramer then," he said.

There are currently 6,000 licensed rickshas in Calcutta, according to the city police registrar, and another 2,000 or 3,000 unlicensed illegal ones. Calcutta is one of the few. cities in India where runner rickshas are still allowed. A few months ago, the city of Madras banned them and replaced them with cycle-driven vehicles.

Just about every other country in Asia has completely done away with rickshas, including Japan, where they

Large investment has been in electrification of main lines to speed up trains and comfortable new trains ply the main routes with passengers lured by the jazzy advertising and down-town-to-downtown appeal.

London-Manchester air service suffered because of the rail competition caused by electrification, and the recent extension of electrified ser-vice to Glasgow is putting the irlines under new pressure.

The 401-mile London-Glas gow trip is now down in five hours flat by a 100-m.p.h. express, which is 56 minutes better than the former time.

And stiffer competition for airlines is on the way since signal system for this route is hastening the day when the so-called advanced passenger locomotive will move over it at 150 miles an hour. First of these should be in service in six years time. British Rail gross passengers revenues are $660 million annually, by the southern region around London, cross-country com-

CLAMS CAN KILL

DUNCAN - Clams on sections of Long Beach and beaches on Handy Island in Barkley Sound are still poisoned by red tide, Dr. P. J. Reynolds, head of Central Vancouver Island Health Unit, warned Friday.

The clams were contaminated by red tide last December. Reynolds advised people planning to dig for clams to check with local fisheries officer to find out specific areas affected by red tide.

Contaminated clams can kill a person.

Sixty-four "pingentes" were killed on Rio commuter runs in 1973, and 482 others were injured. Around 650,000 residents of Rio ride the dilapidated, vandal-damaged trains on an average weekday.

Some "pingentes" lose their grip and fall beneath the train wheels. Others lean out too far and are picked off by utility poles. The most serious of the recent occurrences, which left eight persons dead, ap-parently resulted from a fight between rival groups of "pin-gentes" who were hanging onto two passing trains.

The main reason commuters here take the train rather than buses, which are gener-ally faster, safer and less crowded, is money. The one-way train fare from downtown to slum and lower mid-dle-class neighborhoods on Rio's teeming North Side — a section of the city rarely seen by foreign tourists — is the equivalent of $7\frac{1}{2}$ cents. The bus costs twice that.

"We're talking about people who play games such as 'railroad roulette,' ". he went on, referring to a machismo-inspired challenge in which "pingentes" prove their dexterity by climbing out of the window of a moving train, crawling across the top of the car and coming back in through a window on the other side.

The railroad chief said he would instruct policemen to as possible from trains,
